NEW YORK MANAGERS PLAN CHAIN OF "DOLLAR THEATRES"

Circuit of Houses in Many Cities, Playing High-class Attractions at 25 Cents to $1 Scale, Receiving Consideration of Some of Biggest Dramatic Moguls; Other Newsy Gossip of Stage and Screen.

THE "Dollar Theatre" may very soon become a reality if plans said to be under consideration by some of the leading New York theatrical managers are put into operation. By a "Dollar Theatre" is meant a playhouse to which the top price of admission is a solitary case note; one with a scale of prices ranging from twenty-five cents to a dollar, and offering the public in return an evening of high class amusement, dramatic or musical.

For some time past the rumor has been buzzing along Broadway that A. L. Erlanger and Lee Shubert are keenly interested in the project; interested to such an extent that they are willing to give it their financial support.

As now being considered, the idea is to organize a chain or "wheel" of theatres in various cities throughout the country and to issue franchises to owners of houses in the circuit as well as to owners of the attractions that will play the theatres. There would, of course, be a central booking and routing office and provision made for keeping all of the theatres in the wheel busy throughout the regular theatrical season.

This undoubtedly is a move in the right direction. The cost of entertainment is slow in following the downward trend of other commodities and real necessities of modern life. In some notable instances in New York it has even risen above the inflated cost of war times. The "Dollar Theatre" will be a most welcome innovation to the average family man who craves to be amused, but refuses to mortgage his belongings for a pair of tickets to a reigning stage success.

Paul Powell has been engaged to direct "The Ordeal," an original screen drama by the English novelist-playwright, W. Somerset Maugham, for Paramount. This film offering was to have been directed by W. D. Taylor, the director slain a month ago in Los Angeles, Calif.

Sydney Blackmer, the actor who plays the title role in Clare Kummer's comedy, "The Mountain Man," at the Maxine Elliott Theatre, New York, is heralded by the critics as one of the "finds" of the season. His work more than atones for weaknesses seen in the vehicle and is largely responsible for the continued run of the piece. Miss Kummer, brilliant writer of comedy that she is, is not at her best in "The Mountain Man," according to the views of the theatrical wisecracks.

The American Burlesque Association is gradually going out of business as a traveling organization, according to Samuel A. Scribner, manager of the Columbia Burlesque Circuit, and at one time head of both these organizations. The American is one of the two largest "wheels" of burlesque entertainment in the United States. As explained by Mr. Scribner, the American burlesque companies, of which there are about thirty, will be assigned to cities throughout the country and will operate there as permanent stock companies, changing their programmes weekly. Mr. Scribner said the action had been caused by the high cost of transportation and poor business in general. The Columbia wheel is left practically alone in the field as a result of the change.

Miss Bessie McCoy Davis, as a headliner in Shubert vaudeville, is scoring a success that is reminiscent of her most triumphant days in musical comedy. Two young dancing men assist Miss Davis in her act, which is called "Castles in the Air." It is a hodge-podge of patter and dancing, in the course of which Miss Davis repeats her old-time hit, "Yama Yama Girl," of which audiences seem never to tire. The act is brought to a close with a highly effective tableau of the star landing beyond the "gate of dreams" at the portals of a golden air castle.

That it has made fortunes for all of those chiefly concerned in its production, is the record of Florenz Ziegfeld, jr.'s musical comedy hit, "Sally," which has been playing for more than a year at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York. "Sally" recently rounded out its sixtieth consecutive week. In that time, according to the figures dug up and blazoned forth by the management, there have been nothing but "capacity houses;" the admittance receipts have totalled $2,000,000, and the three stars, Marilyn Miller, Leon Errol and Walter Catlett, have earned $440,000. The chorus girls averaged $55 a week, and the orchestra itself, for the sixty weeks, drew a payroll of $117,832. The Government has taken something like $200,000 in taxes. "Sally," like Cinderella, starts in rags, but according to the financial statistics, she certainly "ends in riches."

The Dolly Sisters, Roszika and Yancsi, after a triumphant season in London, recently returned to this country and are now making a brief appearance in Keith vaudeville. They began their short season around the metropolis by doing their act in two Keith theatres the same week, the Palace in Manhattan and the Orpheum in Brooklyn. They certainly are the busy and ambitious little girls.

Nikita Balieff, master of ceremonies at the performances of the Russian players in the antic theatre, the Chauve-Souris, or "The Bat of Moscow," presented by Morris Gest at the Forty-ninth Street Theatre, New York, is hailed along Broadway as a distinctly new personality. M. Balieff, who is roly-poly and jolly, stands near the wings and keeps up a running fire of comment and chatter during the performance. His work is infectious and New York men-about-town have already taken him to their hearts.

Sir Harry Lauder will be unable to return to New York until next fall, because William Morris has planned to begin his London season on April 17, Easter Monday. Sir Harry has toured as far west as Kansas City and planned to appear in New York. The Scottish comedian will, however, be seen in Brooklyn, N. Y., before departing for Europe. He is booked for the Academy of Music in that borough on March 15 and 16, his last dates in the metropolis this season.

FAMOUS RING BATTLES OF OTHER DAYS

Fought at the Olympic Club Arena, New Orleans, La., March 2, 1892: Bob Fitzsimmons Defeats Peter Maher in 12 Rounds; Irishman, Bruised and Bleeding, Unable to Continue; Other Fistic Classics Reviewed for POLICE GAZETTE Readers.

It isn't very often that a middleweight boxer is capable of taking on a clever heavyweight with a rattling good record—and beating him. However, such an encounter took place thirty years ago this month. Bob Fitzsimmons was the victor and Peter Maher the defeated.

In 1891 Maher came to America carrying the laurels of Ireland. In three months time he fought "Bubbles" Davis, Jim Daley, Jack Fallon, Jack Smith, Sailor Brown and Joe Godfrey. He was victorious over all, and four of the battles were terminated before the end of the first round. Maher was not only a clever boxer, but he wielded a potent glove.

Fitzsimmons was champion at the time and everyone had great confidence in his ability. Nevertheless, the Irishman weighed in at 178, thirteen pounds more than Bob, and was no amateur or weakling in the ring, in fact, he had all the earmarks of a coming champion. The betting was about even.

The match was held March 2, 1892, at the Olympic Club arena, in New Orleans, La. Maher was not knocked out, but he was beaten and surrendered, he was outclassed and admitted he had met a superior fighter. Two rounds told the story and twelve proved it. Incidentally, neither man had seen his opponent before.

Opening Round Is Fast

From the sound of the gong in the first round the two men went at it hot and heavy, and seldom, if ever, had such a furious first round been fought. Maher landed twice on Fitz's chest, but did no harm. There was an interchange of blows, but the Australian was very wary. Peter was a better boxer than was generally supposed, and got in several punches on his opponent's shoulder.

Fitz finally struck a heavy blow on the neck that sent the Irishman to the floor. Some sparring followed. Maher forced the fighting and got in another heavy blow on Fitz's shoulder. Fitz answered his summons with a couple of smashes on the mouth and nose which brought the blood freely and both men were soon covered with it.

Both came up to the scratch in round number two feeling pretty groggy. The Irishman led for Fitz's stomach, but fell short. Fitz failed to counter. Maher led again, landing hard in the stomach. Fitz came back hard in the same place and followed it up with a mean blow on the face. The champion closed the round by landing a stiff one on the mouth.

By the time round three started it was evident that the men respected each other, for they were far more wary and fewer blows were struck. In fact, the fighting couldn't have kept up at the rate of speed exercised in the first rounds. During this canto and the following one there was little action.

When the fifth round opened the men seemed to be greatly refreshed and went at it again hammer and tongs. Bob seemed to be particularly fit and to have recovered the wind which he had lost in the previous round. Maher was covered with blood and seemingly had a little wind trouble.

The latter forced the fighting and Fitz showed his wonderful ability as a ring general by avoiding the blows. Thus far Fitzsimmons showed no injury and little fatigue, while Peter was covered with blood. Maher got in a damaging blow on the neck, and Fitz replied with one on the eye that half closed the optic.

The Irishman opened the sixth round by leading with his left, but there was no one in distance of it. After a few light exchanges Fitz landed in his favorite place, the mouth. Maher cornered Fitz and while trying to get out of a hole he received a solid uppercut in the mouth. They then squared off in the middle of the ring and Fitz's left flattened the Irishman's nose. With the clang of the gong, Maher received three hard jabs in the mouth which appeared to make him welcome a minute's rest.

Maher came up for the eighth with blood still streaming from his mouth and nose. Bob led, getting in on Maher's neck. Countering and cross-countering followed until it was very apparent that Maher needed more wind, and that he was weak. The Australian did all the fighting, continuing to pepper the Irishman around the face and mouth. Just before time was called Fitz nearly floored him with a rocky right-hander in the neck. The round was in Bob's favor.

Round nine was purely a sparring encounter, very few hard blows being indulged in. Maher got a fairly good blow in on the chest and Fitz trumped it with one of his favorites, a right to the nose. The Irish champion landed a right uppercut on the chin which staggered the Australian. Maher was bleeding heavily by this time and his breathing facilities were impaired by a generous flow of blood. The rest, nearly half the round, was spent by the pretty nearly exhausted men standing in the ring facing each other.

Rally by the Irishman

Maher came up much fresher for the tenth. Fitz led with his left, getting a rather light blow on the stomach. Maher countered with right, but Bob was far from it. Maher then made a hard right-hand swing. Fitz ducked but caught it on the back of the neck. Maher received a stiff uppercut on the chin and right on the mouth. They clinched and as they broke away Maher planted two good ones on Fitz's neck.

Peter, up to the time of the eleventh, had been forcing the fighting, but Fitz now took the lead and drove a good one to the cheek. Maher made a comeback with one to the side and a light one on the stomach. Fitz followed by two blows in rapid succession, one on the neck and the other on the cheek. Both men needed wind.

In the twelfth and last round Maher came up tired and appeared to be ready to quit. He had lost, and was then losing a great deal of blood. Fitz on the other hand looked as fresh as he did in the first round. He was not long in planting a clean left-hander right in the stomach. Maher countered weakly, just barely touching Fitz's shoulder. Fitz scored another jab on the nose. When time was called for the next round Maher failed to get up and began removing his gloves.

Maher was criticised for not staying at the guns, but there was no percentage in his continuing. His nose and throat were so clogged with blood that he had difficulty in breathing, even when not in action. It was obvious that Fitzsimmons was the better man.

KID MCCOY VS. TOMMY RYAN

Rarely, if ever, have the wise men of pugilism sustained such a reversal as when Tommy Ryan was defeated by Kid McCoy in the fifteenth round of a battle at Maspeth, Long Island, on March 2, 1895. Ryan had beaten every one in the welterweight class, consequently the majority of the four thousand enthusiasts who were assembled in the Empire Athletic Club to witness the fight felt that McCoy had a slim chance of victory.

Ryan had laid claim to the championship, and justly so. Few thought that the modest young man from the Hoosier state would even put up an interesting match, in spite of the fact that he was conceded eight or ten pounds in the weights. But the unexpected invariably happens, and in this instance it brought about the downfall of the greatest welterweight in the world.

The fight, although resulting in a surprise, also resulted in being one of the most satisfactory battles that had taken place in the Empire enclosure. In every minute there was action, and for fifteen rounds the Syracuse lad took his punishment like a hero, but he finally had to succumb to the superior qualities of his opponent.

McCoy kept stabbing his right into Ryan's face and body alternating with stiff, right-hand punches, that, owing to his length of arm, almost always reached Ryan's jaw. The latter was a badly punished man, while McCoy escaped without a scratch.

In the sixth round of the fight it looked as though he had McCoy, but after that the latter gained strength, and until the finish there was never a minute when he did not have the better of it.

The end came one minute and fifty-four seconds after the opening of the fifteenth round, when Ryan, bruised and bleeding, was knocked down and out.

Ryan had based his calculations for winning on the fact that years previous he had McCoy for a sparring partner, and it is a fact, admitted by the latter, that at that time Ryan was so much his superior in fistic skill that he could put him out at any time during their impromptu encounters. The Syracuse champion had not bargained for such a vast improvement as McCoy displayed.

McCoy proved to possess all the qualifications of a good fighter, and the most conspicuous element in his pugilistic make-up was his splendid judgment in the ring. He fought carefully at all times and never threw away a chance. Ryan was plainly not in his old-time form, his muscles were flabby and his general appearance brought about much unfavorable comment. Withal, he gave a good account of himself, and his gameness was never to be questioned.

One of the few defeats that ever came to Joe Gans, colored ring marvel, will be related in next week's old-time ring battles series. Be sure you get your copy of the POLICE GAZETTE by ordering it in advance.

SKATING AND HOCKEY ON ICE ARE ENJOYING GREATEST OF SEASONS

By PETER P. CARNEY

This has been a wonderful season for ice skating and hockey—possibly the best ever known in the United States and Canada. Both have been popular sports for years, but did not grow as they should. Now both sports are being promoted by national organizations aided and assisted by hotels and railroads in the conduct of winter sports carnivals. These carnivals are being held in hundreds of places, and each carnival will make many devotees of the art of skating.

There are more entries in the skating championship races this year than ever before, and there is more interest exhibited on the part of the newspapers in featuring these races than ever. Plattsburgh, N. Y., recently conducted the National Championships on the Municipal Rink on the high school athletic field before one of the largest crowds that ever witnessed skating races in the United States.

This Plattsburgh rink is a wonderful affair. It is supported by the Chamber of Commerce, the Plattsburgh Winter Sports Association and the people generally. There is a hockey rink, a 220-yard track, a toboggan slide forty-five feet in length, telmegaphones for furnishing music and amplifiers that carry one mile. The track is thirty feet wide. Some 20,000 persons payed to skate on the rink in 1921 and the figures will double this year. The cost is small, just enough to pay expenses. What Plattsburgh has done others can do.

The arrival of Oscar Mathieson in the United States has stirred up the professional skaters. Mathieson cannot skate in Norway. The McLean-Mathieson race was the first and last professional skating race ever held in Europe. McLean's manager made so much of a fuss about McLean's defeat that the Norwegian government put a ban on all professional athletics. Therefore, if Mathieson wished to make money out of skating it was necessary for him to come to this country.

McLean is anxious to try for the 100-mile record made by Joe Donaghy twenty years ago at Stanford, Conn. Donaghy skated the century in 7 hours 11 minutes 38 1/5 seconds. McLean thinks he can take many minutes from this record.

The United States Amateur Hockey Association has made arrangements for the collegiate champion to play the winner of the U. S. A. H. A., and the winner of this match will play the Canadians for the international title late in March or early in April.

"FIGHTING BILLY" MURRAY ILL.

Murray, who earned more than $100,000 during his ring career, is now practically "broke," according to his friends, and financial assistance at this time would be given in a worthy cause.

AT HOME AND ABROAD, IN A STYLE

BRIEF AND TO THE POINT

BASEBALL

President Harding recently received the American League club owners, in session in Washington, D. C., and accepted a season pass to the ball games for 1922. The nation's chief executive promised he would be present at the opening game in Washington on April 12, when the Senators will have the pennant-winning New York Yankees as their opponents. Mr. Harding indicated by a remark to James Dunn, president of the Cleveland Club, that he will be "rooting" for the Indians, the Ohio entry, even ahead of the Washington nine.

John H. (Hans) Lobert, veteran National League third baseman, will again coach the baseball nine of West Point Military Academy this season. Lobert recently reported at the Point and called out the first candidates for preliminary spring conditioning indoors. Lobert expects to develop a fine team.

The Cincinnati Baseball Club of the National League paid a dividend of twenty per cent, in 1920 and 1921, according to the report of its president, August Herrmann, at the annual meeting of the stockholders recently. This seems to be a pretty fair indication that major league baseball is a paying proposition these days. The officers of the Cincinnati board of directors were re-elected.

Rogers Hornsby, champion batsman of the National League, threatens to be a "hold-out" from the St. Louis Cardinals. The sensational second baseman at this writing is said to be demanding $25,000 a year and a three-year contract for his services. The club officials have balked, but have carried on "friendly negotiations" with the brilliant ballplayer. They were willing to pay Rogers $15,000 a year for three years, it was said, but not $25,000. Last season Hornsby's salary was $11,000.

TRACK ATHLETICS

In a special race against his own world's record, Joie Ray, the phenomenal distance runner of the Illinois A. C., failed to shatter his mark of 9 minutes 11 3/5 seconds for two miles indoors at the Samaciar A. A. games in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory, New York city, Feb. 8. Ray captured the 3,000-metre run and then went on for the two miles. He lacked the proper pace, however, and finished the distance in 9:20 4/5. Ray remained out of the 1,000-yard special, in which his close rival, Hal Cutbill, "the flying parson," was entered, and the latter won it, although pressed to the last inch to beat Sid Leslie.

HORSE RACING

Joseph E. Widener's great jumper, Duettiste, recently won the Brook Steeplechase, at Gatwick, Eng., in preparation for the Grand National, the blue ribbon classic of the 'chasing world. The Brook, at three miles, was in the nature of a trial for Duettiste, and as a result of his victory his owner's hopes of taking the Grand National have risen. Duettiste was for several seasons the best of the timber toppers in America. Mr. Widener plans to sail for England shortly to be on hand for the running of the Grand National, March 24, at Aintree.

at the Crescent Athletic Club in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was compelled to play off the deciding game with his brother, Francis S. Appleby, defeating him neatly by a score of 300 to 194. E. A. Renner was third in the tourney. The winner made a grand average of 12.71 over the sweep of five games, all of which he won. The younger Appleby was victorious in four games and lost but one. Two new records were set by the winner, with his high run of 142, and by Percy N. Collins, who finished fourth, with a single average of 27 3/11.

UMPIRES CANNOT AFFORD TO REVERSE THEIR RULINGS

Entirely too many baseball fans have an idea that umpires stick to their bad decisions out of sheer bull-headedness. Those fans are almost invariably wrong. Every umpire time and again in the season understands in a flash after he has decided one way that he should have decided another, but if he reversed himself, thus encouraging kicks, protests and delays, he would lose his job in short order, writes a contemporary.

Very few fans stop to consider why the rule against umpires reversing themselves on decisions of fact is almost as unalterable as the laws of the Medes and Persians, but the rule is absolutely necessary if any ball game is to be finished in less time than is required for one of those three-day cricket matches.

If umpires were to heed arguments, proofs and figures and reverse themselves, they would do nothing but hold court, and few ball games would go more than one inning, as enough disputed decisions would ordinarily arise in the first round to keep the ump engaged all the rest of the afternoon.

Long and painful experience has taught the powers that be in baseball that it is better to lay it down as a definite principle that an umpire shall stick by his decision, even when he realizes on second thought that he was wrong, than it is to encourage the players in the belief that if they talk long and loudly enough they can persuade him to reverse himself.

And the same thing applies to the referee and judges at a boxing bout.

RING HISTORY OF THE NEAR-CHAMPIONS

CHAPTER LXXXII.

YOUNG GRIFFO

One the freaks of the prizefighting, a scientific marvel, whose personal habits brought merited reproach, but whose skill with the gloves was amazing.

IN these days of nation-wide prohibition it is seldom one hears of a man going on a three-day jag. Few are wealthy enough to pay bootlegger's toll for such a spree; certainly aspiring boxers are not prone to such habits. Nevertheless, a jamboree of seventy-two hours' duration was one of the favorite stunts of Young Griffio (right name, Albert Griffiths) in the course of his training (?) for important bouts.

The archives of fistiana record that Young Griffio mixed strong drink with his strong-arm work when he was preparing to fight Jack Everhardt, Horace Leeds, Jimmy Dime and even the one-time feather-weight champion, George Dixon, among others. And, astonishing as it may seem, Griffio, who was his best at the lightweight poundage, held all of them to draws.

This phenomenal pugilist's birth is registered at Sydney, N. S. W., in the year 1871. He passed his boyhood around the Australian docks and eventually drifted into the prizefighting. He came to America in 1893, after having decisively beaten all the Antipodean aspirants of his weight. Upon his arrival here, he astounded our world of ring followers with his cleverness.

His Education Neglected

It was said that he could neither read or write, having had absolutely no scholastic education. It was said also that he had never taken a boxing lesson in his life and was never known to train seriously for a fight. Such statements sound incredible, but the truth of them was generally accepted. What Griffio could have done and might have been will never be determined, but it is safe to say that if he had applied even a moderate amount of interest to his decidedly superior ability, he would probably have been the greatest little lightweight of all time.

His first big match here was with a fellow countryman, "Australian Billy" Murphy, and was one of his best performances in the ring. The fight was held at Boston, May 7, 1894. Murphy was noted in this country as one of the hardest-hitting lightweights that ever lived. His clean-cut victory over Ike Weir and Johnny Griffin had proved that the ex-tailor was there with the wallop good and hard. After Griffio's victory over Murphy, the former, although a lightweight tipping the beam at 133, was matched to box George Dixon, the featherweight champion, twenty rounds.

The Griffio-Dixon fight took place at the Casino, at Boston, June 29, 1894. The building was crowded to the doors and hundreds were turned away. It had been a long time since the historic city had been so worked up over a boxing match.

Dixon was in the best of condition, while Griffio had been roaming about town on a spree. His manager rather doubted if he would be able to find him, much less that he would be in a condition to fight. A search was made and he was found at noon in a saloon very much under the weather. He was hustled into a hack and hurried to a Turkish bath, where he was boiled out. At eight that evening he was almost normal mentally, but physically he was far from being perfect.

Griffio "kidded" the ringsiders while the gloves were being adjusted and was as unconcerned as though he were in a barber shop waiting for a shave. Nearly every one had heard of the erratic actions of this fighter and most of those present knew he had paid little attention to preparations for the encounter.

ter, so they rather expected Dixon to tear him to pieces. They got the surprise of their lives.

Fights in One Position

The young Australian entered the ring and took a bracing position from which he did not move more than two feet all during the battle. He evidently held the champion at a cheap figure, for he sneered at him when Dixon rushed in and missed a left lead for the face. A right drive for a spot below the heart was neatly stopped. Dixon led off in the second with a stiff left on the ribs and an attempt with a right for heart. Both blows were misdirected. He tried again for the stomach, but was stopped by a stiff bracer. Infighting ended the round. The third and fourth were nip and tuck affairs.

In the fifth Griffio went at Dixon with cyclonic fury, which held full sway till the sound of the gong. The negro worked hard and took a terrible beating. He showed the effects of it. The seventh was ruled pretty well by George, but at the end of the round the Australian came back with a hard smash on the neck and another on the mouth. From then on until the twelfth, the honors were even, and the fighting hard and fast. If one broke ground the other was right after him, feinting and keeping him at work.

The twelfth was marked by a hard left swing on the jaw from Griffio. Dixon's attempts at countering passed over the shoulder, but he had buried his left in the Australian's ribs so often that they were a bright crimson.

In the thirteenth Dixon caught Griffio with a left on the face. The round was then fought in a go-as-you-please style. Dixon made three dangerous jabs for the jaw, but all three missed and went around Griffio's neck. In spite of this Dixon had the better of the round. In the fourteenth the able little champion got in a left uppercut again, and from that time on seemed to be fairly able to cope with the peculiar side-ducking of Griffio. A story of the remaining cantos would merely be a repetition of the previous ones; all fast and furious.

Referee Calls It a Draw

At the end of the twentieth Referee Eckhardt announced the decision as a draw. Griffio was the more clever of the two, but in his condition at that time he could not be called the superior. But his performance marked the Australian as probably the shiftiest man in the ring. Griffio was matched with Dixon twice during 1895. Both matches ended in draws, one after twenty-five and the other after ten rounds.

At Coney Island, N. Y., on March 4, 1895, Griffio won a very lively match from Horace Leeds in twelve rounds. It was his eighteenth fight in America and he had lost only to Jack McAuliffe.

Griffio's next big bout was staged at the old Music Hall in Boston with Jimmy Dime. The date was March 8, 1895. At that time Jimmy was regarded as one of the best lightweights in the country. Many were of the belief that in the man from Amsterdam the Australian had met his equal. The bout created no end of mirth among the crowd that gathered in the old amusement place that night, as Griffio was quite a bit better than the ordinary circus.

Dime was in perfect condition for the fight, while Griffio, at ten that morning, was so inebriated that a single tree looked to him like an impenetrable forest. Once again he was hustled to a Turkish bath and steamed out. Dime had plenty of good cash to back him, and when his friends learned that Griffio was "at it again" they unloosened their money belts and put up more. In spite of this, every cent was being covered by the wise men from Borneo as fast as they saw its color.

When the fight started Griffio had a head on him as big as a wash-tub, but that made no difference to him. He was anxious to get in action. The first round opened with Griffio as the aggressor. He looked rather worried in spite of the fact that he kept up a continual chatter with his promoter, Hughey Behan, regarding a good stiff bracer, which was to be ready for him at the close of the round.

Griffio's Cleverness Counts.

As to the contest, Dime did the best that he could, but it wasn't enough, and after eight rounds the bout was decided a draw. Griffio would jab, duck, side-step and double-punch Jimmy at every stage of the game. He made him look like the rankest amateur. He had Jimmy cutting side-swaths out of the atmosphere and hardly ever scoring. Once during the battle, when Dime landed a hard right on the Australian's ear, it angered him.

"Blime you, ol' chap," he said, "fer that I'll smash you on the bloomin' nose."

Then bang! went his left hand as true as a die. He kept peppering Dime so fast that he was bewildered. He was pretty well beaten up by a marvel of cleverness.

Griffio's last performance of any merit was with Jack Everhardt at Buffalo, July 10, 1896. It was a twenty-round battle to a draw.

The first five rounds were more or less of an exhibition, both men trying to feel out each other's methods. From the sixth to the sixteenth, the bout was one which showed off all kinds of sparring, and proved the Australian to be a master of his vocation. Everhardt tried his best, time and again, to land an effective punch and end the bout. But he was fighting with Griffio, the cleverest little fighter in the ring. The men began to mix up as the bout drew near to a close. Everhardt chased his man around the ring at the beginning of the nineteenth, with swings and an occasional cross, but Griffio was not in the way.

"Now For a Drink," Says Griffio

In round twenty Everhardt got a blow in the eye that swelled that already injured member. Griffio had the better of a warm exchange, but there was a rattling flurry towards the close that left the Australian rather weak. The gong sounded and Griffio stopped dead short in the middle of a punch that promised to be a mean one, and extending his hand for the farewell shake, smiled and said, "Now for a drink."

He got his drink—and many more, but before he sobered up he was jailed and given an eight months sentence "for disturbing the peace." From June until December of '97 he fought seven times. None of the encounters registered a credit for Griffio. He was scheduled to fight Tom Tracy on Nov. 18 of that year. Three thousand fans were gathered at the St. Louis A. C., anticipating the return of Griffio to his able form.

The Australian entered the ring intoxicated. The fight started, but before the end of the first round, Griffio rolled under the ropes and made for the dressingroom. Before the spectators could realize exactly what had happened he had made his get-a-way. Such a man was Griffio.

His last fight was with Battling Nelson at Chicago on March 4, 1901, when he was knocked out in two rounds. It was an inglorious end for a boxer of unparalleled promise.

Peter Jackson, the great colored boxer, will be the subject of next week's special story in the Near-Champion series. Tell your newsdealer in advance to save a copy of the POLICE GAZETTE for you.

TARZAN LARKIN KNOCKED OUT

Sailor Maxted knocked out Tarzan Larkin, the bruising big heavyweight, in the first round of a scheduled twelve-round boxing bout at the Pioneer Sporting Club, New York city, on the night of Feb. 7. The mariner crossed a right to Larkin's jaw two minutes and twenty seconds after the opening of the mill, following a brisk exchange in which Tarzan sought to drop his own haymaker upon the extremity of the sailor's chin.

Larkin, weighing 205, had been bowling over the set-ups with great regularity before he met Maxted, and some of his boosters even saw him as a likely opponent for Jack Dempsey.

DUTCH FIRST TO PLAY GOLF, NOT THE SCOTCH

Contrary to popular belief, golf seems to have been played first in Holland. One of the most ancient and interesting of the pictures in which the game is portrayed is the tailpiece of an illuminated Book of Hours made at Bruges. The players are three in number and have but one club apiece, the head of which is steel or steel covered, and they play with a ball each.

The feature which gives this picture a peculiar interest is that all the others show the game on ice, the putting being at a stake, while in this Book of Hours they are putting at a hole in the turf, as in our modern golf.

It is uncertain at what date the game was introduced into Scotland, but in 1457 its popularity had become so great as to interfere with the more important pursuit of archery.

BENNY LEONARD HOLDS ON TO HIS CROWN THOUGH HARD-PRESSED BY ROCKY KANSAS

Lightweight Champion Outpoints Buffalo Italian in 15 Rounds at Garden, but Is Plainly Weakened by Efforts to Keep Under 135 Pounds; Drops Challenger in Eleventh.

BENNY LEONARD, although he defeated Rocky Kansas by a wide margin in their fifteen-round championship battle at Madison Square Garden, New York city, on the night of Feb. 10, brought home vividly to his many thousands of admirers one indisputable fact, namely, that Benny cannot longer hope to defend his title as lightweight champion of the world within the limit of 135 pounds against a dangerous challenger without running a serious risk.

Leonard, weighing in at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the fight, teetered the beam at 134½ pounds. In order to scale under the limit of 135 and save his weight forfeit money, Benny was compelled to exercise almost right up until the time for hopping on the scales, and a few scant hours before the championship battle itself.

In the opinion of numerous experts who were present at the ringside and saw Leonard successfully defend and retain his crown against the assaults of a rugged and hard-hitting opponent of long fistic experience, there was no question but that Leonard weakened himself by his strenuous weight-reducing; so robbed himself of his natural strength, in fact, that he was driven to resort to every ring recourse in his repertoire to outpoint Kansas by such a margin as would make it impossible for the sometimes unfathomable judges in the metropolis to award it to Rocky.

Rocky balanced the beam at precisely 135 pounds; but he was in the veritable pink of condition. Leonard, on the other hand, was pinched and drawn in the face and so skinny about the torso that one could almost count his ribs.

Not once throughout the bout did Leonard show the slightest indication that he had gone back in boxing skill or ring generalship. It was his wonderful "head" that gave him the mastery over the challenger.

Benny can't hope to fight nature. He is growing heavier, as is to be expected; and he must either meet lightweights at catch weights, or make up his mind to mingle exclusively with the welters and if possible annex the welterweight championship. He needs at least five pounds more on his frame to restore his hitting power and confidence in himself.

It was the third meeting of Leonard and Kansas. Five years ago Benny took a decision in ten rounds from Rocky. On that occasion Kansas, who rightly deserves his name because he is a veritable "Rock of Gibraltar" among the lightweights, was dropped by Leonard several times, but always got up from the canvas and was still fighting back at the end.

Last summer, in the old Federal League baseball park in Jersey City, N. J., Benny garnered another decision from Kansas in twelve rounds, although they then met at catchweights.

From the standpoint of a Leonard partisan the most gratifying feature of the evening was the wonderful reception accorded to the lightweight champion as he made his way into the ring. The stamping, cheering and handclapping lasted fully three minutes, and was more like the applause for a presidential candidate at a national convention than the greeting to a knight of the padded mit.

When Referee McPartland sent the boxers into action for the first round it was Kansas who did the leading. Leonard contented himself with feinting and stepping out of range as Rocky sought furiously to connect with one of his savage left-hand lunges. A glancing blow caught Benny in the mouth and started a thin stream of blood running from the corner down his chin.

The story of the opening canto was the story of the next four rounds, saving that Leonard was perceptibly picking up and getting ready for more decisive doings. Rocky in the second badly mussed up Benny's sleeked hair and brought a laugh from the crowd. In the third Kansas missed a left swing that spun him almost out of the ropes; a swing that would have been "curtains" for Benny if it had landed on his jaw.

Round five was the first in which the champion really had the honors beyond question. In this frame he connected solidly with Kansas' jaw with several inside right-hand uppercuts and also planted a damaging left hook over Rocky's heart. At the end of the round Leonard went to his corner bleeding from an old cut over his right eye which had been reopened by one of the Buffalo Italian's blows.

Benny was easily the better of the two in the sixth round. He flashed in and out, scoring repeatedly

BECKETT AND COOK TO BOX FOR BRITISH HEAVY TITLE

THERE will be a meeting in the latter part of this month, between two prominent members of the Down-and-Out Club personally founded by Georges Carpentier of that dear France. Which is merely another way of saying that articles have been signed, according to recent advices from London, between Joe Beckett, heavyweight champion of England, and George Cook, heavyweight diadem disporter of Australia, for a fistic brawl.

The imperturbable Georges having bowled over each of these British huskies in hollow fashion, they have that much in common, and the British public will be spared this time, at least, the spectacle of one of its very own pugilists playing second fiddle to Carpentier's trusty right.

Joe and George have agreed to mingle at the Holland Park Rink, in the British metropolis on March 27, for the British championship. Concerning the forthcoming bout the London weekly publication, Boxing, has the following to say:

"He (Beckett) has not only signed up with Cook, and has agreed to meet the Australian, but he has also, so far as we can learn, agreed to do so without any insistence that he should 'hog' the purse—without moreover, placing any insuperable financial obstacles

A Human Life at Stake

WITH feverish excitement, the crowd in the courtroom listened. Judge, jury, attorneys and onlookers leaned forward in strained silence, eager to catch every word. Every eye was fastened on HIM while, with amazing calm, HE gave the crucial testimony, demonstrating while he talked with chart and instrument.

Daily, in courtrooms all over the world, this scene is enacted. The center of interest is the Finger Print Expert. He is respected and deferred to by all. His name is constantly before the public in the newspapers.

Why Don't YOU Be a Finger Print Expert?

Why not? It is a profession of unusual distinction and rich rewards. You can acquire a complete training right at home in your spare time without giving up your present work. And many other U. of A. S. graduates have advanced from ordinary work to high official positions with equal rapidity.

$25 a Day for Expert Testimony

Fame and distinction are not the only rewards of the Finger Print Expert. There are not enough trained men to fill the positions that are created almost daily. Salaries are high. $25 a day fees for court testimony are common. More Finger Print Experts are needed. Here is a big opportunity for you.

The Secret of Renewed Vigor

World War Conditions Brought Out
New Remedy More Available
Than Gland Treatments

The effects of premature age, physical weakness, and the persistent deficiency of physical power in men and women in Europe during the world war, forced leading medical authorities to the need of devising a successful corrective treatment. The privations of war, in the field and at home, including the "Flu," left millions in a deplorable condition. Effective treatment was developed with remarkable results in renewing vigor and stamina in men and women.

The secret of renewed vigor—the vigor of youth—is in the treatment, in this country called Korex Compound. This remarkable restorative comes in tablets and is more available than the much discussed Gland treatments.

If you lack physical power; if you lack the strength and stamina that you ought to have, try Korex without risk for its cost. It contains no habit forming or harmful drugs. Its action is upon the central nervous system, and improved condition is usually known in a few days.

If you suffer the handicap of physical weakness, you can use this treatment under the positive guarantee of satisfaction. Distributed and guaranteed only by the Melton Laboratories, 811 Massachusetts Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. Send $2.00 for double regular box, postpaid in plain wrapper. Or if you prefer, send no money, but pay the postman $2.00 and the few cents postage when package arrives. If the results from its use are not entirely satisfactory, the $2.00 will be cheerfully and immediately refunded upon request.
